Masqueraders Will Parade Streets Of City Tonight

Monessen's annual mummers' parade will occur this evening and from all indications will be a bigger success than ever before. The affair is being held under the auspices of the Board of Trade, with C. F. Mentzer and Jake Meyers as chairmen of the committee. The merchants have donated over twenty-five prizes to be given to those appearing in the best costumes. The prizes range from $5.00 in cash to a box of candy and they will be distributed among all classes of masqueraders by the judges. These judges have been selected from the Board of Trade and they will be assisted in their work by a number of ladies from the Ladies Auxiliary. They will be stationed between Fifth and Sixth streets on Donner avenue and will only consider the masqueraders in the parade.

The parade will form at the freight station at 7:30 and will start promptly at 8 o'clock, headed by the Louhi band and the local Boy Scouts. The line of march will be up Donner avenue and down Schoonmaker, passing the reviewing automobiles twice. After the parade the Boy Scouts will act as patrol and will report all persons not conducting themselves in the proper manner to the police. Burgess Dunlap has issued strict orders to his officers to arrest anyone becoming unruly, although certain restrictions have been lifted and a good time is assurred all.

Social Affair

Mr. and Mrs. John Chamberlin entertained Saturday evening at their home, Oneida street, for their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crane and son George of Fayette, Ohio. About twenty three guests were present and enjoyed the evening. Mr. Crane will be remembered as a former resident of this city, having come here when the town was in its infancy. He was employed at the Page mill and left here about nine years ago. The out of town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. George Russell of Clairton and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Lamb of Adrian, Mich.

Deliver Ballots

The last few days have been strenuous ones for the clerks and the janitors around the county commissioneers' office. Ninety thousand official ballots to be used by the voters of this great county tomorrow have been sent out to the judges of the election boards in the 186 precincts. Over 45,000 voters are registered and it is expected that a very heavy vote will be cast Tuesday. 22,500 sample ballots will be sent to the various polling places.

The second ward in Monessen with almost 1,000 voters is the biggest election district in the county and Donegal borough which has 31 registered electors is the smallest.

Start Today

The first passenger trains from Fairmont to Pittsburgh over the P. & L. E. railroad were operated today and necessitated a change in the local schedule. The P. & L. E. train leaving Fairmont at 6:45 in the morning arrives in this city at 9:39 and at Pittsburgh at 10:45. The train due at 9:39 is known here as the fast morning train to Pittsburgh, which according to the schedule in effect October 17 was supposed to arrive here at 8:47.

Only one train will be run each way over the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie lines and one each way over the Pennsylvania lines. In the afternoon the Fairmont train will leave Pittsburgh at 5:15, arriving here at 6:23 and at Fairmont at 9:30. With the inauguration of this new service, it will give an opening to the principal towns of West Virginia through the Monongahela valley. Morgantown is on the route of the new road and is only a two hour ride from this city. The fare to Fairmont from Monessen is $2.18.

Win And Lose

The Monessen Crescents added another to their string of victories Saturday when they defeated the Donora Steel Works team on the Page grounds by a score of 13 to 0. The game was hard fought from beginning to end and although greatly outweighed, the locals outplayed the visitors in every department of the game. The Steel Works team is one of the heaviest in the valley and their back field is composed of four pugilists.

The Scholastics unable to get games with teams in their class tackled the semi-professional team of Swissvale, traveling under the name of Murdochs and went down to defeat by a 19 to 0 score. On the Murdoch team were such well known stars as "Chick" Freeman, Wheelock and Murray, all of whom have played here against the All Star team.

The Scholastics were outweighed 25 pounds to the man but played a great game. The work of Spiegelberg caught the eye of the crowd and they rooted hard for the local midget.

Voters Take Notice

One cross X tomorrow opposite the name Republican in the square at the extreme left of the ballot will vote the straight ticket. It will vote for every nominee of the Republican party for county and municipal office. It will vote for the Justice of the Peace, the councilmen in all their wards and the school directors and constables. If you split the ticket for any candidate, you must mark an X opposite the name of every man you vote for.

Vote the straight ticket. You will then pass to the non-partisan ballot and mark an X opposite the name of the Judge you wish to support for the the Common Pleas bench. There are two candidates for Judges of the Superior court, then marks are necessary. There is also a non-partisan ballot. There are four amendments to the constitution submitted for the approval of the voters. You are required to mark an X opposite the word Yes or No on each of the amendments.

Local People Injured In Street Car Accident

Two local women were injured when a Pittsburgh-Charleroi street car struck a freight train at the Castle Shannon crossing Saturday afternoon. The injured ladies are Mrs. Margaret Marshall, aged 63 and Miss Agnes Marshall, aged 19 of 122 Second street. The aged lady is the more seriously injured and is suffering from contusions of the spine and neck, while Miss Marshall is suffering from bruises on the head and arm.

The street car in charge of Patty Moore of Charleoi, was bound for Charleroi when the accident happened and was well filled with passengers, but very few were injured. When the car hit the train, the impact threw Mrs. Marshall back over the seat, causing her injuries, while several suit cases fell on Miss Marshall.

The local people were probably the worst injured and they were brought to this city late Saturday afternoon in an automobile. Mrs. Marshall is confined to her bed in a serious condition and a trained nurse is attending her. The cause of the accident could not be definitely determined.

Our Future Plans

That the new naval building program, if carried out, will place the United States safely in second place among the world's naval powers can hardly be questioned, even allowing for the greatest activity on the part of Germany, France and Japan, our nearest rivals, after the war. In fact, when we figure a bit, we reach the conclusion that even at this writing, the United States navy ranks second to that of Great Britain. Reliable data up to May 31,1915, gave the naval losses in the war as 48 miscellaneous war craft for the allies, and 75 for the Germans. Of the latter, 23 were classed as battleships and armoured cruisers. At the outbreak of the war Germany had, all told, of battleships, first and second and third class cruisers, gunboats and monitors—all branches except torpedo boats, destroyers and submarines—106 fighting ships. The United States had of the same classes 104 fighting vessels. Germany had 40 battleships, the United States had 40. Germany's principal superiority in ships of the line was in third class cruisers Assuming that upon the average the efficiency of the fleets were about the same, and that Germany's losses have been of average costliness, then Germany had on May 31 but 82 vessels as against our 104. But since May 31, Germany's losses have continued, we have had none. Of course, Germany has been building new ships, but almost entirely of the auxiliary class—torpedo boats, destroyers and submarines. And Germany's losses of these crafts have been something enormous.

The principal ponderance of German vessels over ours was in destroyers, at the outbreak of the war. She had 152 against our 69, but the number of German destroyers had greatly decreased, notwithstanding additions, and ours has increased. And, boat for boat, Uncle Sam's destroyers are as good as any afloat. If British reports are true, Germany has only a fraction of her once great submarine flotilla left.

No matter how great their desire may be, after the war, no European nation will be financially able to at once enter upon a very extensive building program. The French navy is still inferior to ours. The only country which might threaten our supremacy is Japan, and it has still a long way to go before it reaches even our present plane. The additions contemplated by the president and his advisors will not only numerically increase our present navy, but will practically double its efficiency by more evenly balancing it. The war is placing Uncle Sam back near the head of the class.

The startling accusations of R L. Ferguson, former counsel for Rev. Dr. Hillis, pastor of Henry Ward Beecher's distinguished old church, against Dr. Hillis, recalls the somewhat similar sensation of which Brooklyn's old Plymouth church was the setting in 1874. Henry Ward Beecher, then at the heighth of his illustrious career, was charged by his former associate, Theodore Tilton, with intimacy with Mrs. Tilton. A committee of Plymouth church investigated the case and exonerated Mr. Beecher; but Tilton brought suit for $100,000 against him, and after a trial lasting six months, the jury disagreed; a week's confinement and 52 ballots ending, it is said, in nine votes for the defendant and three for the plaintiff. The scandal and notoriety seriously impaired the eminent divine's influence and rendered his "Life of Christ," the masterpiece of his literary efforts, practically unsalable.

Now again, after 40 years, Plymouth church is in the limelight. As before, the congregation appears to be loyal to the pastor.

DR. A. D. MILLER

TO THE VOTERS OF WESTMORELAND COUNTY

What is a laboring man? I will let you answer that question. You shall be the judge of both my honesty and fitness to fill this important office. It is true that I have not come from East Liberty, Allegheny county, seven years ago, and I have not lived in Pleasant Unity six years and three months, and nine months in Irwin. I was born and raised in good old Westmoreland county, as my mother and father were before me and I expect to die in it. Now, what is a workingman? Is he poor, does he stint himself and his family so that he can buy medicine for the old and feeble? Does he pay the rent of widows and buy clothes, food and coal for the orphans? Does he work for the same people for nothing for thirty years because they are feeble in mind and body? Does he attend the crippled and non-paying night and day, snow and rain, Sundays and holidays whether he himelf is sick or well. Now if this is a working man, then I am one, or if it means a professional man, then I am one. You can prove the truth of what I say by asking anyone that knows me . If you think I deserve this office, vote for me. I shall appreciate it.

Your friend,
adv. 19-3t Dr. A. D. Miller.
Republican nominee for county treasurer

TOLD IN MONESSEN

A Resident Known to all our Readers Relates an Experience

Readers of the Independent have been told again and again of the merits of that reliable, time-proved kidney remedy—Doan's Kidney Pills. The experiences told are not those of unknown persons, living far away. The cases are Monessen cases, told by Monessen people.

Mrs. R. Gilmour, 102½ First street, Monessen, says: "I suffered for years from a lame back and often when I stooped, the misery was so intense that I cried aloud. If I moved suddenly, it seemed as if something snapped in my back. When I exerted myself in sweeping or doing housework, the pain was unbearable. I felt tired and listless all the time and my head ached. My eyes were affected and I was all worn out. I consulted several doctors but none of them seemed to do me any good, and finally I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. A few boxes made me quite well. Others of the family used Doan's Kidney Pills as a kidney tonic and think highly of them."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Gilmore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Kasota, Minn. — "I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

The BROKEN COIN by EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by GRACE CUNARD

COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

Novelized From the Motion Picture Drama of the Same Name. Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

"Captain—quick!" he exclaimed. "There is trouble with the engines."

"What's wrong?" inquired the ship's master.

"The right-hand tubular has gone bad," exclaimed the engineer. "She has been pounding like a million hammers. The water is low, and the intake's clogged Something's wrong—I cannot tell what. We have tried to shut her off and can't. The boiler may go at any minute."

"Explode?" inquired the captain calmly.

The engineer could only nod.

"Stay," called Frederick at this juncture. "Let the engineer go back to his work. Let us first find the helpless persons below. If danger impend let us bring them up to have their chance for safety."

The captain, a gallant man withal, turned to him and nodded grimly "Go back to your post, Miller," he said to the engineer "We will join you presently."

He himself led the way to the lift which led to the lower decks and the hatchway which covered the ladders into the ship's hold.

They found themselves at last deep in the bowels of the vessel, among the bales and casks of the cargo, where for a time all was darkness and mystery. But as they hurried here and there, commanding the guidance of the two recreant seamen and casting the rays of their lights hither and yon, at last they saw a trussed-up bundle behind a bale of goods which seemed to have some human semblance. It was Roleau. Frederick himself was first at his side. He bent over him, freed him, and after a time revived him.

"Monsieur—your excellency!" said he at length. "It is you."

"Where is she?" demanded Frederick. "Was she here?"

"I have known nothing for some time it seems. Yet she was here, yes—she is gone, I know not where"

Frederick left him to continue his hurried search in the confused freightage of the ship's hold. At last he found that which he sought.

She tried feebly to raise herself as she heard footsteps, heard a voice she knew to be that of her friend.

"Mademoiselle—thank God!" was all Count Frederick could say.

"It is you, then?" was her reply. "What has happened? Why are you here?"

"I am here, my dear mademoiselle, in the justice of the immortal gods—to save you—to care for you. I heard of the plot against you. My own boat lies alongside—I have come. I am here to take you from this ship, if so you wish. Come then, let us hasten. There is scant time."

They all crowded now to the ladders up from the hold, and, rapidly as they might, found their way back to the upper deck. There came confusion, noise, trampling, shouts, sounds not ordinary at this stage of the voyage of a vessel putting out to sea. The passengers themselves suspected something to be wrong They crowded now about the captain excitedly, expostulating. The master of the ship pushed them aside

"Well, Miller," he demanded again of the oil-stained engineer who hurried up, "what is it?"

"It may be a minute, sir—or less!"

In an instant they were face to face with the ultimate peril of the seas—fire, explosion on shipboard.

There came from below that sound which had been expected, dreaded—a muffled, heavy roar, comparable to nothing in the world in terrifying quality at such a time as this. The ship so lately safe and strong beneath them all, now trembled Midway her decks rose, spread apart, fell. A cloud of blinding white steam rolled from the engine rooms, stifling and scalding all within its way. Cries of anguish came from below decks, cries of despair. To these were added now the far more numerous cries of those in mortal terror

Obedient to their orders for a time, the crew held to their posts The boats were lowered one after another. Yet into each there piled a senseless mass of packed humanity, overcrowding and rendering it useless as it reached the surface of the sea

Children and women and strong men fought now for a place in the last of the boats Discipline broke and failed What had been a happy party of travelers was now a disorganized mob

His arms supporting Kitty on one side, those of Roleau on the other, Count Frederick did his best to reach the rail. Useless, hopeless! They were forced back time and again.

"Jump!" cried Frederick at last "Jump! We will swim for it. We must take the last chance."

The look on the face of the girl at his side was one in part of despair but more of trust. Unhesitatingly the three sprang together.

The sea closed over them. They rose after an agonized instant which seemed death itself—rose but to see the giant ship which had carried them raise her bows aloft, shiver and tremble, and slowly slide back and down beneath the waves In the whirlpool which marked the spot they were but little human units, floating as best they might among scores and hundreds of others.

"This way!" cried Frederick, and he and Roleau aided Kitty to a floating piece of wreckage. But others saw it also. Time and again they were fought back from it as others stronger or more remorseless claimed it as their own.

In all this commotion of shouting and struggling men, of wailing women, of flailing arms and beating fists, Frederick and Roleau lost sight of Kitty at last—she had gone, they knew not where, in that chaos of the sea.

"Where is she?" demanded Frederick weakly, himself well-nigh spent. "Which way?"

"I know not," gasped Roleau, himself in as bad case as the other. "I cannot tell, but fear that she is gone."

They swam about for a time in search, but could not make out the whereabout of her whom they sought; then they hoisted themselves one on each side of a floating spar and rested.

"Allow me, excellency," said Roleau, and flung across the end of his belt. "Let us lash fast. I cannot hold much longer."

Spent and hopeless they rested as they might and allowed fate to have its way with them.

"Our boat—the yacht, excellency," exclaimed Roleau at length. "Where is she—the vessel which brought you out?"

Frederick could only shake his head. "Gone," said he. "I doubt not she was scuttled by the heavy ironwork blown out by the explosion. There is no hope."

CHAPTER LXII.

Marooned.

The vessel when blown up was well on her way with the favoring winds which she sought, which in ordinary course would have carried her out into the Mediterranean.

How Count Frederick and Roleau lived they scarcely knew. Happily the water at that latitude was not cold, and the day was one of calm.

"Roleau, she has perished!" murmured Count Frederick. "She is gone. Let me, too, perish then, for I have never been able to say that which I should have said. I have had no opportunity to expiate many things which I have done."

"As well die now as any time," said Roleau.

Wind and wave carried these two far—they knew not how far, and had no means of guessing, for they could not tell how long a time had passed since the explosion which had sunk the ship. They knew not which way to look for land, if land there might be. It was by mere chance that at one moment, as they flung high on the crest of the wave, Count Frederick saw, many hours after the wrecking of the ship, something which caused him to give an exclamation of surprise

"Roleau," he exclaimed. "There is land ahead, I believe!"

"Look!" said Count Frederick at length "They are coming out to us"

Surely enough, even from where they were they could see dark forms running here and there, could see the launching of a boat, could see it coming on, rising and falling on the waves

At length the craft came alongside manned by strange, swarthy natives whose speech they did not know, yet who seemed friendly enough withal to serve as rescuers for them. With small ceremony they were hauled on board, and the boat, turning, made way back again to the shore ahead.

"'Tis an island, Roleau," said Frederick, after a moment spent in examination. "Not so large, but excellent under foot, is it not true? And these people seem not unfriendly to us."

For a time they had been left alone but now they saw certain of the natives returning with food and water Upon these both the shipwrecked adventurers fell with eagerness. Their captors stood about and grinned in pleasure. All the wealth of Count Frederick, his gold, his castles, his lands—these things seemed little in value as compared to what these swarthy natives brought him now.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Kitty, the Castaway.

If Count Frederick and Roleau had been dismayed when they saw Kitty Gray swept away from them in the mad struggle for safety in the sea what must have been her own feelings as she found herself separated from these powerful friends? Once more she found herself alone—and once more in the blind instinct for self-preservation she did what she could for her own safety

She dared not think of the fate of her friends. She mourned them now as dead, but still in her subconscious mind kept bitterly fighting the conviction even as it came. And as she argued, she found herself swept away farther and farther from the place where last she had seen them.

In some way, she knew not how, Kitty found herself among many others upon the same considerable piece of wreckage where Roleau and Frederick had endeavored to place her soon after the explosion Many others now clung to this She shuddered as she cast a glance about her over the water, and drew closer to the center of the raft. One after another she saw them lose their hold; one after another she saw them carried away by the waves. As for herself, preserved miraculously, she knew not how, she fastened herself as best she could to the frail floating floor and ceased to struggle. Mercifully her senses left her for a time.

When she came once more slowly and painfully to a realizing sense of what had befallen, she looked about her wearily.

She was alone upon the sea. Of those who had been about her, none now survived! Not far from her a body or two floated, but not a living being was to be seen, not a survivor save herself had found this means of safety.

There was no food. There was no fresh water for her. There was no means of raising a sail, or using an oar, even of hoisting a signal had she had one. And yet the sky above her was so blue and gentle, the sea around her so kind, that all now seemed less terrible than it had been but now Hungry and thirsty as she was she shuddered as she thought of the added pangs that might be hers. She called aloud in her distress, her despair There came no answer, save in the shrieks of the circling birds which hovered, ghostlike, above her.

The waves bore her onward, she knew not where, and cared not how, for how many hours she could not tell. Face to face with herself, her past, her future, the unhappy girl passed a period of unknown duration, engaged in her own reflections

It was not her own life she feared to lose, so she said, for life after all was a little thing, a temporary passage at best. But if only she might have lived now for the sake of that which she felt in her own heart—for the sake of that uncompleted period of her own life whose dawn she acknowledged to have seen but now!

He was gone! She had seen him swept away before her very eyes. He was her enemy, who had so often taunted her and defied her, who had fought her in every contest of wits—yet in turn he had aided her to escape and saved her but now—instead of enemy he had turned into friend or more than friend—and he was gone The sunset of her day came even with its dawn

"Yes," she said to herself, "he saved me at the cost of his own life" And the life of that other faithful friend, Roleau, the dauntless, it, too, had been wasted to save her own—the life she now could hold but worthless, since it must be lived alone. They were dead—and she had been the cause of that! What could life hold further for her?

Kitty Gray bent her head down upon her knees. Her hair fell about her face. And thus she sat, she knew not how long, resigning herself to her fate, making her peace with what she felt now must come. "Now," said she, "let me die!" And when once more the sleep of exhaustion came upon her she thought it that of death itself

She wakened, none the less, in time—for strong indeed are the ties that bind us whether or not we like to this life into which we are born without our asking. She wakened and stared with hollow eyes about her at a world which she neither knew nor loved. But even so, at length her gaze found something to cause her eyes to kindle, her breath to come a trifle faster.

Far in the distance she had caught sight of the shore of distant land—the same sight which in turn had met the gaze of that friend whom now she mourned. It lay there low on the sea and distant—land, some sort of land she knew not what.

She looked at it dully, apathetically in truth, she was too far gone to care Whether or not she retained consciousness through the remainder of her voyage, she herself could never tell.

At length, a weak and unimportant bit of flotsam of the sea, Kitty Gray was cast up upon the shore, rejected by that sea but now so eager to claim her as its own. Yes, by some miracle she dared not ask what, she had been spared. This at least was land. If death must come, it was not now to be death through peril of the sea. Wearily she lifted herself from her bed upon the sand, raised herself upon an elbow to look about her.

What she saw gave her no great delight Rather, had she had strength left for terror, she had known additional terror now.

Approaching from a distance were certain figures, inhabitants of this land, whose look she could not recognize, whose language she could not understand. They approached shouting, gesticulating. They were armed, and they advanced upon her menacingly.

DOCTOR PRESCRIBED VINOL

To Restore Strength to This Weak, Nervous Woman

Many fair minded doctors prescribe Vinol because they know of what it is made, viz:—the medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers, peptonate of iron and beef peptone. without oil or grease, in a mild tone wine. They know these are the oldest and most famous tonics. Read the result in Mrs. Mason's case.

"I keep house for my little family of two. and got into a weak, nervous, run-down condition. I was tired and weak and did not know what ailed me. My doctor prescribed Vinol. I noticed an improvement before I had finished the first bottle, and I am now feeling fine and doing all my housework." Mrs. M. S. Mason, 203 Passaic street, Trenton, N. J.

Every weak, nervous run-down person in Monessen, feeble old people and delicate child in Monessen should try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it fails to benefit.—Hirsch Drug Co.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy — If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Voters Attention

Attention of the voters is called to the proposed amendment to Constitution No. 3 which is the last amendment on the ballot to be voted on at the election tomorrow. This amendment is in regards to workmen's compensation and is of great importance to industrial communities such as this city. It gives the General Assembly the right to enact laws for the protection of the workingman, either from accident, illness or death. J. J. Cushing of this city, will be remembered as a member of the committee who worked on the forming of the workmen's compensation bill.

John S. Johnston

Democratic Candidate for Register of Wills

Three reasons why the voters of Westmoreland county should support John S. Johnston.

1st. He is a workingman. "carpenter by trade." well qualified to fill the office.

2nd. His opponent was brought into the county about 12 years ago. Was a Democrat until he went into David Miller's office when he became a Republican in order to get an office and has been in the court house ever since. J. S. Johnston came into the county nearly 40 years before him for to work, and has been working ever since.

3rd. If the old adage is true that "A word to the wise is sufficient," so should these few words to the workingmen be Nuf Ged. 18-3t

In order to convince the public that he has one of the neatest and the best minstrel and vaudeville companys that ever played in Monessen, the GREAT SPIEGEL, in making the general opening of the Monessen Opera House offers an invitation to the citizens of this vicinity absolutely without cost, with the exception of children under fifteen years of age, who will be charged the nominal sum of five cents

The GREAT SPIEGEL promises that nothing will be said or done to offend or mar the most fastidious lady. Ladies and children are invited and welcomed.

In connection with this show the GREAT SPIEGEL lectures and demonstrates the virtues and merits of his father's remedies made in Dr. M. Spiegel Labratory, Albany, N. Y. His lecture on hygiene and health are wonderfully interesting and of great value to suffering mankind and a preventive to those who are well.

"Listen to that band," everybody remarked Saturday night. A concert will be given every night at 7 o'clock in front of the Opera House.

Enters New Field

Miss Mary Brehosky, for the past two years field worker for the Woman's Home Missionary society of the First M. E. church, leaves Uniontown for Monessen, her home, where after a few days' rest she will go to New Britain, Ct. to take up her chosen line of endeavor.

During her stay in Uniontown, Miss Brehosky has been responsible for the formation of sewing classes and Sunday school classes among the foreigners located at the plants near Uniontown and her energetic work is reflected in the annual reports of the Home Missionary Society's work in the region.

Her assistance has been a valuable help to the McCrum Slavonic Training school, of which she has been indirectly connected.—Uniontown Genius.
